The Frog and The Scorpion pt 2: Modern times

There once was a frog lay all day watching the skies in the sun. Catching flies from where it stay, oh it was fun. Then one day they were approached by a scorpion. At first they were torn, but remembered a tale once to warn, and so it was decided, the scorpion elighted, there wasn't any harm talking as he has no charm. He asked for a ride to the other side of the lake, where there will be sun and fun and all the food they can take. The frog stated in a huff, I will not I know that ride with you will be more than just rough. So the scorpion left the frog with great haste, to immediately ask a favor of the one called great snake. The snake immediately agreed to the favor that was quite a small task, If you want me to trick the frog for you you must also bring one to me was all that he asked. Confused the scorpion asked the great snake if I couldn't trick that frog how will I ever bring one to you there must be some mistake, I have this tub of warm water you'll tell one is a bath and while they're distracted they'll be shown the serpents wrath. I'll give them a deadly bite that to the naked eye it cannot be seen, a hypnotic state their eyes it gleams. Then that frog will convince the other, with guns and drugs, manipulation and violence, the methods we'll have them use are infinite and moralless. One by one we'll lead them on the boat once that's done then the fun and we'll have them by the throat, then let's set sail then they'll wail but it'll already be too late all at once they made it on the snakes dinner plate.. After them then it's you, scoprion it's time to face your fate. The scorpion used it's tail and gave it a flail put holes in the boat so now it won't float. Destroyed by it's own stinger reality gave him the finger, so now they'll sink to the bottom sense is never that common. The scorpion thinking the snake it is rotten, but then it asked the snake you see, why did you do this to you and me, It is my nature the snake responded. And back on that shore not a one was left no frogs, snake, or scorpion just the plants and insects, the snake used the other frogs to make sure that all the frogs were hunted day and night, one by one, all without rest.